Countries to which Personal Data is disclosed

In the ordinary course of its business, and depending on the services and/or products you use, the Bank may disclose your Personal Data to recipients located in the countries and jurisdictions listed below:

All countries in which the Bank carries out its business.
Jurisdictions in which the subcontractors appointed by the Bank operate, in particular the member states of the European Union and the European Economic Area, the United Kingdom and the United States.
Jurisdictions in which you hold financial investments (such as securities, currencies or other financial instruments, including derivatives and collective investment schemes) and/or in which you carry out transactions (including payments, securities transactions or other operations), in connection with the financial and banking services provided by the Bank.
Jurisdictions whose competent national authorities supervise the Bank's activities.
Other specific jurisdictions in which third-party service providers operate, whether for particular banking and financial services subject to specific conditions (for example, the exercise of voting rights by proxy for securities listed in the United States) or for certain specific services.

If Personal Data is disclosed to a country whose legislation does not guarantee adequate protection within the meaning of Swiss law, the Bank puts in place, to the extent required by the applicable provisions, sufficient safeguards, in particular standard contractual clauses, or obtains your consent, so that the disclosure complies with the data protection law in force.

The Data Protection Notice contains further details on this point; for any question not answered therein, the Bank may be contacted at data-protection@bordier.com.

Terms beginning with a capital letter have the meanings assigned to them in the Data Protection Notice.
